SENIOR DANCE.

Popular Class Gives Another Success ful Affair.

The Senior Class, A. H. S., gave one of the most successful dancing parties of the season last week, Friday night, in Associates' Hall. The Seniors are taking unto themselves much commendation and not a little glory for the excellent manner in which they carry out their undertakings. At this last event, fully one hundred persons were persent making the floor somewhat crowded, but ensuring a substantial addition to the class treasury, which is always heavily taxed as graduation time approaches and extra expenses necessarily Misses Therese Norton, Marion Foser, Helen Bridgham, and Julia Shean acted as ushers, and the guests were received by the matrons, Mrs. Benjamin Norton and Mrs. Parker H. Foster. The floor was in charge of Louis Moore, asmember of the class,) furnished the music which consisted of a selection of the best popular music, and encores were demanded again and again.

For so young a party the costumes worn were especially handsome, some very elaborate gowns being noticed. owing to the enthusiasm and expressed desire of the participants, the dancing given was continued until 12.30. Among

FISHERMEN'S LUCK

Four Arlington boys and three officers of the Medford police force, one of Hartmann them a sergeant, played a game of "hunt the thimble" in the early morning of last Saturday along the banks of the Mystic River. The boys were after with about 100 couples in line. From smelts, which it must be admitted was very wrong of them, as it is out of season for smelt fishing, and the policemen tinued.

Among the notable guests present were D. G. T. R., M. F. Kelly; Sub. C. R., Thomas O'Neill, of W. E. Russell Court; C. R., Thomas Fay. of Court 37, Volunteer of the Hub; C. R., Charles Higgins, of Paul Revere Court; P. G. Sub. C. R., Jos. Jacobs; C. R., William Farrell, Spring Hill Court.

No supper was served in the hall, but Dale's Lunch Room and La Breque's Lunch Cart were generously patronized by the hungry dancers.

The regular topic program of the Young People's Religious union was postponed last Sunday evening for two weeks. Mr. Allen addressed the meeting. The next meeting will be held a week from tomorrow evening at 6.30. The service will be led by Miss Nellie Chase and the subject. "Dr. Edward Everett Hale." will be introduced by F. Alex Chandler.

The Porcupine club held their April social in Waverley hall, last Saturday evening, April 19. Rev. Dr. Bicknell had been announced to lecture on "Personal Experiences in the Civil War and Life in Dixie," but on account of illness, it was necessary for him to cancel the engagement. Mr. Penniman was the speaker and his talk on a trip across the continent was extremely interesting. It was about 8.15 when the members and guests left the musical program of Wiggin's orchestra to take seats in a Pullman car for the trans-continental tour. Mr. Penniman is an easy, humorous and interesting speaker, and with the aid of a fine set of stereopticon views, many of which were colored, held the attention of his listeners through the whole talk. Following the lecture the party retired to

Their Cheapness Is About Their One Redeeming Feature.

Chinese inns are without register or clerks. On riding through the gateway your bridle rein is seized by a dirty boy, who helps you to dismount, shourprietor and boy then hold a parley as to what rooms are eligible, and then a door is pushed open and the traveler is shown to his apartment. It is usually about twelve feet square. The walls and floor are of hard mud, and so are the beds, which extend entirely across the side of the room, with only space enough between them for a small table and one chair. The room is lighted by one window, in which paper takes the

The first duty of the proprietor in making a patron comfortable is to stop up the holes in the paper window pane. He never tears the paper off entirely and replaces it with a new one, because the sheet of paper is worth about one-tenth of a cent, and the innkeeper is not wasteful. Indeed he pastes little slips of paper over the holes until all the light that filters through it is of a mottled hue.

At one end of the mule shed is the kitchen of the inn. It is here that the meals for all the patrons are prepared, to be eaten in the rooms. The menu is not elaborate. It consists only of bowls of rice and tea. Should the traveler desire a greater variety of food, he can buy it himself in the market, and his own servant can cook it in the kitchen of the inn. To sleep on the bed of a Chinese inn would be for a foreigner an impossibility were it not that he is always so exhausted at the end of each day's journey that he finds it dif-Air Tight Weather Strips. ficult to remain awake ten minutes after alighting from his pony. after alighting from his pony. He lies down on the mat that covers the hard heap of mud and surprises himself at heap of mud and surprises himself at the soundness of his slumber.

The one redeeming thing about the inn is its cheapness. Just as the traveler is about to depart in the morning the proprietor tells him the amount of his bill. Everything is charged on the "European plan." Every cup of tea, every rushlight candle, the paper winlist which the proprietor reels off in Contractors singsong, but the total is surprisingly low. The cost of food and lodging for one night for a traveler and two servants, with stabling and fodder for his ponies and cart mules, is about 50 cents.-New York Mail and Express.

Boasted Too Soon.

The rear end of a Fordham car was congested the other afternoon. There wasn't even "standing room only." A pickpockets!"

Everybody laughed. A gentlemanly looking fellow said:

"No man need be afraid of pickpock ets if he does as I did. I have a self patented scheme. I have a buttonhole in my vest pocket. I run my chain through it and attach the other end in the usual way. They can't draw that watch through that buttonhole. No pickpockets in mine, and don't you for-

A Story of Two Necklaces.

When General Weyler was sent by Spain as governor general to Manila, Den Carlos Palanca, the wealthy Spanfardized Chinaman, determined to send Mrs. Weyler a gift, the customary way of obtaining the good will of the Spanish officials. He found at a jeweler's two necklaces, each costing $20,000 and both being so beautiful that he could not choose between them. So he sent them both to Mrs. Weyler with the message that she should make her choice. He received a warm letter of thanks from her, stating that the necklaces were so beautiful that she could not decide between them and hence would keep both, which she did.

Theories About Drowned Bodies.

It was a popular theory in days gone by that the body of a drowned man would float the ninth day. Sir Thomas Browne alludes to it as believed in his time, and in his "Pseudo-doxia Epidemics" there is a discussion on this fanciful notion. It was also believed that the spirits of those drowned at sea were doomed to wander for a hundred years owing to the rites of burial having never been properly bestowed upon their bodies.- Notes and Queries.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

Lecture Delivered at Cambridge, Last Week, by Judge William G. Ewing, of Chicago.

Judge William G. Ewing, of Chicago, spoke to a large audience at Cambridge, last week, on "Christian Science: Physician and Redeemer." Judge Ewing is a member of the board of lectureship of the Mother Church of Christian Science in Boston, and spoke here under the auspices of First Church of Christ, Scientein, of this city. The hall was crowded, and the audience held attentive for an hour and a quarter.

In introducing the speaker, Hon. A. S. Apsey said: Ladies and Gentlemen: Time was, and is not so very far distant, when any man who advocated either in public or in private any doctrine in the arts, in the sciences, or even in religion, which differed from those generally accepted by people was classed as a charlatan and as a doer of evil works.

We fondly believe that today, in the dawn of this 20th century, we have come to a new and a higher understanding of what is right and just and honorable and what is proper for reasoning and thinking human beings to believe in. Not much more than a century ago we, here in Massachusetts even, beheld the spectacle of judges in our courts condemning innocent and defenceless human beings to be hung and executed because they were charged with witchery. We believe that that era in the development of the human race is past and gone forever. We believe that we can now give a fair hearing to any man who honestly advocates what he believes to be the truth either in science or art or religion. I take it that we are met here tonight to listen to one who will in good faith present for our consideration doctrines which he believes, and which many of us believe, to contain the truth. Here in Cambridge—in this city of Cambridge—which for more than a century has been the abiding place of the greatest university of America, which has had upon its shield the one word "Truth," we should listen with peculiar attention to such a man who has to present to us what he believes to be at least a part of the truth.

It is my pleasure to present to you tonight a man whom most of you probably know by reputation at least, a man who for many years has been engaged in the same profession in which I myself am engaged, a man who is the official lecturer of The First Church &f Christ, Scientist, of Boston, the Hon. William G. Ewing, of Chicago. The judge then spoke as follows:

It seems reasonable to say that if Christiam Science is proximately what its adherents claim for it, its merits should command thoughtful, candid investigation; that if it has prophylactic or therapeutic force of even slight efficiency afflicted men and women everywhere should know that fact, and certainly if it heralds in any measure the message Jesus brought to the world, the weary children of men all round the globe should know that fact. I stand beweary children of men all round the globe should know that fact. I stand be-fore this great audience this evening with the single purpose of encouraging hon-est, dispassionate investigation of a suband on the other hand I am sure that if Christian Science is the message Jesus brought to earth, it will receive your cordial indorsement and active effort to give it to the world. Now, while the healing power of Christian Science is a mere incident, still strangely enough it is the feature of our belief that meets the most derisive opposition. I propose this evening to discuss briefly with you the two phases of Christian Science, namely as a therapeutic agent and as a namely, as a therapeutic agent and as a religion, the highest concept of God as Father, Preserver, Savior.

I assert that the medical force of Chrisreligion, the highest concept of God as Father. Preserver, Savior.

I assert that the medical force of Christian Science appeals as strongly to the common understanding, common sense of men, as does the curative quality of any drug. In asking your attention to this feature of Christian Science, I only ask that you will try it by the same rule, apply to it the same tests that in all the past have been and today are invoked to determine the merits of material medicine. It is clear to my mind that if the therapeutic virtue of Christian Science is measured by its works, its fruits, its cures; if determined by precisely the same rules applied to the use of the medicine of men, you will find that it meets all the requirements demanded by medical science in determining medicinally the value of drugs, and furnishes every possible reason, for your accepting the medicinal force of Christian Science as a preserver of health and as a destroyer of disease, that the medical profession has at any time asserted for reliance upon material remedies. It is an uncontroverted proposition that the use of material medicine from the beginning has been, and now is based wholly upon experiment with dumb animals when opportunity offers, and with men when seeming necessity requires; and yet it is apparent that from such experiments you can only learn the result of the use of drugs and never the primal cause of the result. By closest observation and most persistent search you will not be able to discover why any specified drug has a specific effect any more than by searching you can ascertain why you breathe or see or hear, a mystery that the genius of the world has not been able to solve. I certainly hazard nothing in saying that there is not a physician living whe can tell you why any drug has its reputed effect; and with much investigation I have not been able to learn that any writer upon material medicine from the Egyptians to our own time ever has attempted to solve the mystery of the cause of the action of medicine, to state the rea

Scott's Emulsion is not a good medicine for fat folks. We have never tried giving it to a real fat person. We don't lare. You see Scott's Emulsion builds new flesh. Fat people don't want it. Strong people don't need it.

in given quantity acts as a tonic, and in an infinitesimally increased quantity becomes a remorseless poison; or why a given quantity of opium will lull you to given quantity of opium will lull vou to sleep, and a little more sweep you to death. All the doctors know, or can know, respecting the active properties or therapeutic force of the remedies they give is what they have learned or may learn from experiment. No one will deny that the entire practice of the administration of drugs is based solely upon observation of actual tests, and is wholly dependent upon the theory that a remedy effective in a large tice of the administration of drugs is based solely upon observation of actual tests, and is wholly dependent upon the theory that a remedy effective in a large majority of cases, involving similiar conditions, is a safe remedy to administer in that class of cases; that is, if upon trial, actual test, covering, perhaps, thousands of cases of a named disease, the case being similar in early manifestations, condition of pulse, respiration, digestion, sections, etc., it is found that a given drug broduces a favorable result in 60, 70 or 80 per cent of the cases tested, then, by the consensus of medical men the world over, it becomes a rule, a law of material medicine, that the given drug is a safe one to prescribe in all cases coming within the scope of the experiment made; and the result of such test is absolutely the limit of the physician's knowledge upon the question of the choice of medicine to be used. I have stated the rule by which the value of each drug is tested, and I beg you to understand that I am not complaining of the rule, that I find no fault with the modus employed by the docters in reaching their ultimate standard of judgment respecting the choice of the remedies they use; in fact, it might be freely conceded that none better could, or can, be suggested, and for this argument I do concede that the rule the doctors have adopted is the very climax of human precaution touching a subject that human reason cannot compass; and I refer to this rule, not to criticise or lessen its force but simply to invite all who are satisfied with such a test of the virtues of Christian Science meets tonight, and for 30 years has met the ecclesiastical and for 30 years has met the ecclesiastical and to prophecy distance prophecy of Isalah concerning Him, a prophe scheme the service of the single purpose of encouraging honest, dispassionate investigation of a subject that profoundly has impressed my own highest sense of truth. I do the strategy of the service of ment of cases cured the fact that a large proportion of the cures effected by Christian Science were of persons confessedly beyond the reach of material remedies, we will have an experimental test of mental therapeutics. Divine healing in every way more satisfactory and conclusive than is afforded of the curative quality of any drug in the whole history of medicine.

I submit this simple proposition: If as intelligent men and women, you may determine the virtues of material medicine by experiment; if, by human observation and experience you may ascertain satisfactorily to your reason the efficacy of a given drug, by a percentage of cures effected by its use, then is it not clear beyond controversy that the same test will measure with equal accuracy the medical virtues of Christian Science? And in common fairness, and by the logic of the axiom that "Things equal to the same things are equal to each other," are you not driven by relentless logic to accept the hundreds of thousands of closely observed tests of the merit of mental medicine in forming your judgment of the curative force of Christian Science? ly observed tests of the merit of mental medicine in forming your judgment of the curative force of Christian Science? The time has long since passed when any intellectual man, without a shock to his moral sense, can say that Christian Science does not have its victories over disease; that it does not restore health; that it does not reclaim the drunkard; that it does not heal wounds of bone and feels, that it does not give vision to the that it does not reclaim the drunkard; that it does not heal wounds of bone and flesh; that it does not give vision to the eye and hearing to the ear; that it does not "minister to the mind diseased." In almost every city, village and hamlet of cur country, examples of these cures exist, and may easily be known by reasonable observation, there are tens of scores of persons so healed in this audience tonight. It is conceded that the practice of Christian Science has not been an unbroken success; there have been some failures; not all treatments have resulted in perfect cures; there have been some fatalities, but these have been comparatively few, and as an indication of how very few comparatively, let me tell you that in this country the states of Colorado, Nebraska, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York present the largest growth, organization and practice of Christian Science in the United States, and comprise more than one-half of the population of the entire country; and yet, in the whole life of Christian Science the aggregate faalities under its practice in these twelve es, during a period of 30 years, are equal to the deaths occurring under erial medicine in any one week in the two years, in the cities of Chicago Greater New York. If this is true, d Greater New York. If this is true, there any possible reason why an inligent man, having faith in the prace of material medicine by reason of perimental tests, should scorn to be quenced by similar tests of Christian lence healing; and is it a satisfactory planation for not doing so for such an e to say to his mind mental healing purpose on the company of the co unreasonable, because beyond his comis unreasonable, because beyond his com-frehension, when it is evident that the fame person, with all the aid of medical science, would be unutterably contused in an effort to determine why a pellet or powder or lotion, has wrought a cure in any case; surely, it is the extreme of inconsistency for any man to pride him-self upon his wisdom in accepting as a basis of action the result of an experi-ment in the medicine of man, if he re-jects like tests respecting the medicine ects like tests respecting the medicine

Scott's like tests respecting the medicine of God.

I address myself to all thinking people who reagard mind as master of matter; who recognize an infinite Intelligence as all cause—the Principle that created and governs all things; the Supreme Good whom men call God, revealed in the scriptures as the object of our love, worship and adoration, and of whom Jesus Christ said, "God is Spirit and they that of Spirit, Mind, God, is the basis, the inspiration, the soul of Christian Science. It follows that, in our thought, Christian Science is a religion and only a religion of love that Jesus preached and love, then it is not difficult to understand (in fact, we cannot avoid the conclusion) that He is the only God, the only Spirit, infinite in goodness, mercy, truth and love, then it is not difficult to understand (in fact, we cannot avoid the conclusion) that He is the only God, the only Spirit, infinite tests respecting the medicine of God.

I address myself to all thinking people who reagard mind as master of matter; who recognize an infinite Intelfigence as all cause—the Principle that created and governs all things; the Supreme Good whom men call God, revealed in the scriptures as the object of our love, worship and adoration, and of whom Jesus Christ said, "God is Spirit, and they that in the mutal cause—the Principle that created and governs all things; the Supreme Good whom men call God, revealed in the scriptures as the object of our love, worship him must worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth." I thus address myself because the recognition of the supreme Good whom men call God, re everywhere present; always with us: "A circle, the centre of which is everywhere and the circumference nowhere." With this concept of God we easily can understand how He is in absolute reality "our stand how He is in absolute reality "our strength and our Redeemer." in whom literally "we live and move and have our being." And we may easily know also that man—God's man—is not a mold of clay, a fashion of matter, but is spiritual; the image and likeness of spirit, the reflection of God, and hence abides in health, truth, eternal life.

Christian Scientists simply are trying to live the life Jesus lived. His mission was not only to preach the gospel, but to heal the sick. This was the prophecy of Isalah concerning Him, a prophecy of Isalah concerning Him, a prophecy Jesus declared fulfilled by His own presence on the earth. The declaration of Jesus to His disciples, "the works that I do ye shall do also," was made to the people of this day as certainly as to the apostles and the people among whom they wrought; and Christian Scientists have demonstrated that they have been included in this declaration of the Master.

on earth.'

on earth."

Christian Science meets tonight, and for 30 years has met, the ecclesiastical antagonism that every new phase of religion or new thought of God has been compelled to encounter; but sooner or later, in God's own time the clouds will break, and crowned and glorified, the truth will be seen, like a star, "dwelling apart" in its own glory—always its own. We do not complain in bitterness of the opposition that Christian Science has opposition that Christian Science has met. It has simply been the assertion of inherited belief that has for centuries antagonized every new thought of God. Our fathers endured this before us, and their fathers before them; yet the world has constantly grown brighter and freeer and better. It is our duty to add to the good that came to us from the generations gone, and to it our children will add still another good, born of the greater light of their own day; until, by and bye-free from superstition and superior to fear—"the mystery of godiness" will be lost in the sweet simplicity of perfect love.

Intellectual integrity is not easily attained. We must, though ever so reluctantly concede the fact, that while it is comparatively easy to appear honest with our neighbors it is extremely difficult to know that we are honest with our selves. In some tomorrow we will recognize the incomparable decention pracognize the incomparable decention practiced by men upon themselves in the vain effort to find a logic of saying more potent than the logic of doing. Christian Science is not a religion of beliefs but of works; not of theories, but of demonstrations. There is nothing concerning which people so persistently decive themselves as about their religious beliefs. It is so much easier to say than ceive themselves as about their religious beliefs. It is so much easier to say than to do; and then one cannot know what he believes, in the sense in which Jesus used that word except by what he does. Belief is more than intellectual conviction; it includes the elements of trust, the energy to read, and the ability to think. The latter part of the title of this marvelous book to my mind is very significant, for I cannot avoid the conclusion that a great value, if not the great value of Mrs. Eddy's wonderful gift to men, lies in her clear, reasonable and demonstrable interpretation of the Holy Scriptures, God's revelation of Himself to you and to me, for our guidance to eternal life. The critics of Christian Science and especially among our clerical brethren. life. The critics of Christian Science, and especially among our clerical brethren, dwell most and with most pretense of learning, upon Mrs. Eddy's book as an exegesis and its author as an exegetist of the Christian religion, and unfortunately, as a rule, these good people elaborate their views in languages dead for centuries before their auditors were born. Mrs. Eddy may, or may not, be familiar with the language with which Jesus spoke or the language in which his speeches and events of his life were reported, but it must not be forgotten that Jesus interpreted his own gospel by his life in the universal language of love his life in the universal language of love and kindness, a language known to every weary child of earth, and Mrs. Eddy is scientific master of that tongue, master of the significance of the pure, holy, gentle, Christ-like living, and can and has told it to the world; in all her loving search for this great Truth she took as her only guide the Word of God and as her only counsel the Great Loving God Himself. I hesitate not to say to you tonight as a man among men and not fully lacking in appreciation of the beacon lights of history, romance and song that have illumined the centuries as they passed, that in my judgment this great book of his life in the universal language of lov illumined the centuries as they passed, that in my judgment this great book of this great woman contains more of sweetness, song, hope and help for men than all the product of the printers' art, save only the Bible, your Bible and mine, our father's Bible.

In the resplendent glow of this dawning century, rich in the accumulated good of all the past and richer far in the promise of good with which its high noon will bless the world, may we not, in the grace of lofty Christian manhood, make our grateful acknowledgments to Mrs. Eddy for her wonderful contribution to the joy, song and redemption of the world?

TO STUDY ASTEROID EROS.

One of the most interesting astronomical investigations that has ever been made is being set on foot by the astronomical observatory of Harvard, from which Prof. Solon I. Bailey starts this month for its southern station at Arequipa, Peru, to study the peculiarities of Eros, which is, perhaps, the most remarkable of the asteroids or minor planets yet discovered. While Eros comes nearer to the earth than any other celestial body, its presence in the heavens was noted less than five years ago. Since then it has been kept under constant surveillance. Soon after it was discovered it was found that the planet was a variable—in other words, that its light was sometimes bright and sometimes faint; but one very unusual characteristic was observed—one which no other known star has, in fact—namely, that it sometimes varies and sometimes does not, it is the cause of this irregular variation that Prof. Bailey will seek.

After the asteroid's discovery its history was traced back by means of the great collection of star photographs at Harvard, and its peculiar habits were discovered. All sorts of theories have been offered to account for its seemingly erratic variations, the two most seriously considered being that it is either a double One of the most interesting astronomi discovered. All sorts of theories have been offered to account for its seemingly erratic variations, the two most seriously considered teing that it is either a double star or an elongated, cigar shaped body whiling through the universe end over end, as it were, so that first a broad side and then one end is turned toward the earth; and it is the latter explanation to which Prof. E. C. Pickering, the director of the Harvard observatory, inclines. This particular time has been chosen by the Harvard observatory for the study of the idiosyncrasies of Eros because the planet will be "in opposition" early in the summer of 1903; that is to say, at that time it will be in line with both the earth and the sun, and will be nearer to terrestrial observers, under more favorable conditions for study, than it will be again for several years. The Harvard photographs show that Eros was only 13,000,000 miles from us when it was in opposition in 1894, but that was before its existence was known.

The reason for carrying on the investigation at Arequipa rather than in Cambridge is that the orbit of Eros is tipped at such an angle to that of the earth that the asteroid will be practically invisible from here at the time of its opposition, as parly rising above the horizon of these northern latitudes. The method of study which will be used is very interesting. A continuous series of measurements of the light of the star will be made nearly every night during a period of six months. This will, of course, include the opposition, but it is intended to begin the observations long before that time—say, at the end of next March—when the southern skies are clear of mist and haze, and continue them into the fall, until the stormy season comes on again.

southern skies are clear of mist and haze, and continue them into the fall, until the stormy season comes on again. It is hoped that the reason for the little planet's varying degrees of brilliancy may be found by examining the measurements of the various intensities of its light when it is in close proximity to the sun. The measurements will be made with a photometer—an ingenious telescopic device, perfected by Prof. Pickering—which brings the light of any heavenly body that is to be examined into direct comparison with a light of known intensity, or, as the astronomers call it, ef a known magnitude. Much depends upon the skill southern skies are clear of mist and haze magnitude. Much depends upon the ski or, as the astronomers call it, of a known magnitude. Much depends upon the skill of the observer in this work: for vall accuracy is an important factor in the comparison, and the whole operation requires, of course, great care, fine judgment and long experience.

Prof. Bailey is probably better acquainted with astronomical work below the equator than any other living American astronomer, having spent many years at Arequipa. His first visit was of two years' duration: and in the course of it he took part in the establishment of the Harvard station, which, co-operating with the observatory at Cambridge has made possible the systematic and complete mapping of celestial conditions from pole to pole, dav after day—a process that has been in some ways the most valuable single astronomical accomplishment of the last quarter century. In his study of Eros he will be assisted by the members of the regular staff at Arequipa, which has recently been increased by two young men from the vicinity of Boston—Mr. Manson, a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who has had some experience under Prof. Bailey here, and Mr. Wyeth. STYLISH SPRING COSTUMES JACKET OF BLACK TAFFETA.

A Novel Basque

This charming little jacket is of black This charming little jacket is of black taffeta, tucked in clusters and perforated in a small, neat design, showing the white satin lining. It is fashioned with a novel basque or skirt, which appears only at the side and back, and the large collar is of embroidered batiste over a still larger collar of embroidered taffeta. The sleeves are very wide and flaring at the wrist and have double turned-back cuffs of taffeta and batiste. A belt of folded taffeta completes the jacket which is a pretty model for spring wear. All the tucks are stitched with Corticelli sewing silk.

A novel feature for blouse jackets as well as for Eton skirt jackets and dressy garments in general is the jabot vest effect. It has been stated that some of the foremost Paris houses will accentuate the drooping shoulder effect both in waists and in outdoor garments. Quite a fea-ture in jackets is the long coat collar of taffeta which are variously enhanced with

THE OPEN HIGHWAY.

If only one will betake himself to the highway and keep his eyes wide open, he will see the world in miniature. The misfortune with the most of us is that we "cross lots" so as to shorten distance and thus save time, and besides too many of us make the way with our eyes shut. "The world was not made in a day," so why not take time enough to see things as we go along. On the highway one will meet with all sorts of people and be overtaken by them. There will, perhaps, come along the good old farmer, from away back in the country, with a spare seat beside him in his wagon, and before you are aware he will shout out with a hearty welcome in his voice, "jump in and have a ride"-or it may be that a turnout from the suburbs of the city will overtake one with two or three spare seats, but no "jump in" does he hear. Now and then one catches sight of the day laborer homeward bound to meet his waiting family. Here come the boys and girls just let loose from school, and how lively they make things along the road! There goes, it may be, "the woman of the town," and how we gather our immaculate robes about us as we pass her, lest we should betray our own human weaknesses! And here comes the "tramp" with red old New Hampshire tramp way in face of a furious northeast snow storm, all at once exclaimed "what a makes no difference which way I go," whereupon he turned himself about and had the storm at his back. Yes, it is in the open highway that one meets all sorts of people, and yet we all of us are very much like them. The miniature world we see on the way, is that man and woman who "take Lo private way."

To-day is Arbor Day th:oughout the State of Massachusetts. This day dedicated to "the old oak tree, the monarch of the wood," had its origin in the far West where the trees were and in many parts still are "few and far between." The day, however, has become so popular that now it is observed in most of the states. Trees are frequently mentioned in Scriptural writings, and everywhere are they made the subject of poetry.

Who does not remember with peculiar pleasure his favorite tree on the old home farm? One of the chief at- Gilmanton, New Hampshire. tractions of that first Eden of which we read, was its trees, and had Eve not been so moved by a spirit of intense currosity we might today have had our little Edens scattered all up and down club house during the day. the earth, under the trees of which we could have dozed away the time at our own sweet will and pleasure. But Eve wanted to know too much, and so in an prize with 93. impetous and indiscreet moment she ate of the fruit of that tree upon which there had been put an irrevocable prohibition. But for that unfortunate experience in the life of Eve, we all would now have our Edens well set with trees. As it is, we must plant the shade tree in barren spots of earth and along the dusty highway. Who will plant a tree where it is most needed? We say "needed" for there is more than one place where instead of planting a tree, one should be cut down. The subject of too much shade has been discussed in previous issues of the Enterprise, so that we need only reaffirm what we have so frequently declared to be the fact, that no home can live and thrive without the sunshine. We should be careful where we do our tree-planting today. We need to give Academy street and Pleasant street the go-by, and find some place where the sun blazes away for the entire day without let or hindrance. Why not plant a tree in front and another back on the grounds of the Russell school house? There should buildings, shade trees, but not so near as to shade the rooms. The shade of a tree should never fall upon the private or public building. Plant your tree, boys and girls, and you older grown, but plant wisely.

THE NINETEENTH.

The Nineteenth of April in Arlington was an ideal day, the weather conditions being well nigh perfect. The streets were early astir with bicycles, automobiles and gay turnouts, all hastening on their way to Lexington Green and the monument. Amongst them, an old-fashioned stage coach from Maplewood, which passed up Massachusetts Avenue, attracted no little attention. It is said by competent judges that there were three thousand persons from out of town in Arlington during the day. It was a good-natured crowd, and one not given to fault finding, but the lack of water to drink caused some little discomfort to many. The fountains along Massachusetts Avenue were not running, as they should have been under the circumstances.

Early in the afternoon people began to assemble on the Green before the Unitarian church to watch the play-out by the firemen. Promptly at two o'clock the Eureka boys came marching down the street, with their "tub," to the music of the band. They were all in uniform and both looked and were at their best. Drawing up into never fails of finding the members of was served them in Menotomy Hall.

In the evening, a patriotic meeting was held in the town hall. George Y. George H. Wellington presided. The musical numbers of the programme were rendered by Robinson's quartet of Boston, who were obliged to respond to encores each time. Hon. John Reed, ex-senator from Cambridge, followed Speaker Meyers in a brief, appropriate speech. The closing number of the programme was the singing of 'America." It was regretted by every one that Representative McCall, who was detained in Washington by imperative duties, could not be present. The assemblage was not a large one.

THE NINETEENTH.

Crowds Throng Lexington All Day.

Celebration of Historic Event Makes Gala Day for Many-Oratorical Exercises, Sunday, Bring Out Serious Side of Occasion.

The celebration of the nineteenth went off satisfactorily for every one. There were features in it to suit all tastes. There was the usual military parade in the morning which every early bird enjoyed. Then there were the popular band concerts in the morning and afternoon. Band music is the only music for out of doors, and on all such occasions there would be little fun sion—something new for us—These without the band. There were also the questions will be settled by common usual number of opportunities for losing one's money in one way or another. In fact, there were more than the usual number of opportunities, to judge from the unusually large number of thefts which were reported to the police. In one or two cases a quite large sum of money was found missing, so that there were some who thought the day's pleasure rather expensive. A stream democracy able to do what Napoleon of people in carriages and on bicycles could not. poured into Lexington all the morning, and while there may be those who think that the celebration of the Battle of Lexington might be made more serious and thoughtful, still when it is considered that perhaps many of the visit-ors last Saturday do not get their full share of fresh air and warm sunshine. after all it may be the outing alone did more real good than is realized. by all oppressed people for liberty and kind of celebration in the form of a as ours successful and enjoyable dance at the Old Belfry Club. The stage was decorated with lilies, azaleas and palms. Flags and bunting decorated the hall. Odell's orchestra of six pieces rendered the following program: 1. March and chorus, from Tanhauser; 2. Overture "The Magic Flute"; 3. Nocturne from Midsummer Night's Dream, 'collo solo by Carl Behr; 4. "King Dodo" Luders; 5. Cavatina, Raff, violin solo by F. S' King; 6. a. Minuet, Bocherini b. Pizziest, Thomas, 7. service was attended by those who look upon the 19th of April as a time for serious thought and reflection. This meeting, as Rev. C. F. Carter said in his introductory remarks, "brings to a fitting end the celebration of yester-day." It was thoroughly enjoyed by everyone present, and the hymns were sung with a will which showed the en-thusiasm of the audience. Mr. Merriam led the singing. The orchestral club deserves special mention. It is to be hoped that the club will continue as a permanent organization. Such an orchestra is a credit to any town, as well as a great benefit and pleasure. The following was the order of services: No. 1. "Blessing the Standard." Gruenwald, The Orchestral Club. No. 2. hymn, "America." Led by Mr. E. P. Merriam. No. 3. Introductory address Rev. C. F. Carter. No. 4. "Peace on Earth." The Orchestral Club. No. 5. Responsive Readings. Led by Rev. C. A. Staples. No. 6. Prayer. Rev. C. A. Staples. No. 7. Hymn, "O God beneath thy guiding hard" etc. No. 8. Address, "Can we trust our Democracy?" No. 9. Hymn, "Onward Christian Soldiers." No. 10. Prayer and Readington. Rev. L. D. Cochrane. tian Soldiers." No. 10. Prayer and Benediction. Rev. L. D. Cochrane. Rev. C. F. Carter, in his introductory remarks brought out the idea that we are working out the experiment of popular free government for our own sake and for the sake of the world. Mr. Carter referred to three points made by Washington in his inaugural address. 1st. His recognition of the divine hand that led our nation. 2nd. His insistence on the intimate relation between obedience to the divine laws and human prosperity. 3rd. The fact that we were working out our problem not only for our own sake, but for the benefit of humanity at large.

Lincoln also said that we were testing whether such a government as ours can stand. McKinley sounded the same note. We have had problems of set-ting up a popular government, of keeping our integrity; we have now to face the problem of adjustment of social and commercial conditions, the great responsibility which rests upon us.

said which is never sufficiently learned."

Ever since inventive genius began her progressive arts man has sought reease from drudgery, and striven to attain with less laborious effort the comforts and luxuries of life. And whereever wealth has displayed her seductive allurements, there men have flocked with high hopes of securing her benefi-cent favors. The fields are deserted and left to return to their native wildness, while the cities and large centers have become congested with a strug-gling mass of humanity. But should we not have cities, manufacturing centers, and marts of trade? Most certainly, for these are the natural product of that divine discontent and unrest implanted within the soul to further the designs of the Creator in developing the globe on which we live, and at the same time make it a training ground for man himself. And in all the progress which our country has made in a century of its existence we see that the the frontier from the Atlantic to the Golden Gate, the brains that have built our cities in times of peace, and have marshalled our armies when the trumpet has sounded the alarm of war, were nursed and reared on the country farms. There are cities yet to be built, states to be formed, and armies to be led to conquest; and the need for better musbrawn and brain, of firmer sinew and finer texture is greater than ever before. And where shall we look for its development? "Its characteristic life comes from the

And is fresh with the breath of the morning,

And the fragrance of wild flowers, And the songs of many birds, And the idyllic sweetness of green fields." Two thousand years ago that "grand old man," Cato, said, "The agricultural population produces the bravest men, the most valiant soldiers, and a class of citizens the least given of all to evil designs." All thinking people recognize the fact that the present age is rife with competition; and only he who is equipped with intelligence and skill, knowledge and training, has the power to enter the contest with any hope of success. All progress is attained through struggle and persistent effort, and the sole and only hope of development and existence for any state is in the intelligence of its people,—intelli-gence seasoned with common sense. What then! Are we to progress or decline? The answer is found in the record of history. As long as ancient Rome remained true to the teaching of Saturnus and rendered cheerful homage to Ceres, patron to the soil, she had but to command and the whole world was at her feet; but when her treasuries became swollen with the spoils of conquest, and luxury, the hand-maid of idleness, enervated her representative men, and instituted slave labor at the expense of the sturdy yeomanry of the fields, her decline was only a question of time; and on the page of history may be read her epitaph, "Poor in abundance, famished at a

It is said that the monotomy of country life, the wearisome reiteration of experiences that interest us no more, reduces life to a low level of dull pain One cause of this condition may be attributed to the narrow and stunted life, which prevails in the back country. Dering much of the year life is made up of hard, incessant labor from the glimmer of dawn till darkness puts an end to toil. It is not strange, therefore, that the ambitious young man at the first opportunity makes his exit from such a stage to play his part where life is more varied, and the hope of reward more promising One hopeful feature of the times is in the "rapid transit" that extends in all directions from our large centers far into the suburban country, bringing the stifling congestion of the city into daily contact with fresh air, green fields and blooming flowers. But farther back, in the "rural districts," the advantages lessen as the distance increases, and discontent with country life increases in like proportion. In these latter days, however, the leaders in public education have attempted to counteract the constant drift from country to city by introducing the study of nature into the school curriculum, in order to help the child to see and appreciate the varied beauty, the wonderful activity, and the marvelous transformations that are forever going on in the laboratory of nature all around him. This is all right, if only it be carried to sufficient length to accomplish the object sought. But let us take a short ramble through the "rural districts" of New England, and explore the delightful spots by murmuring brooks and shady dells, where Grecian nymphs might sport and dance to nature's music. thought of an Interested observer is, "What a charming site for a school-house!" But no! "The land is too valuable!" There are other spots, equally well marked,-a ledge of rocks, with no tree to mitigate the burning rays of the summer sunshine, nor to temper the chilling blasts of winter; as barron of verdure as the desert of Sahara, valueless to man, good for nothing to beast. On such sites we shall find buildings. Their style of architecture is similar to that of a drygoods box, save that they have gable-roofs, windows and doors. The bare plastered walls are the only ornaments within; the sittings are the cheapest, and hence the most uncomfortable kind. We call them public school-houses, and into them we put scores of little children, and demand that they shall come forth educated and cultivated men and women! A few gifted natures do, but what wonder is it that the boys grow rough and the girls list-less! What wonder is it that they hate the country, and allow the homes of their fathers to go to decay and ruin! Their city cousins have things attractive, convenient, and pretty, and the boys and girls in the back country have as keen a relish and longing for what is modern as do the most of those whose lines are cast in more advantage

If only those who are enthusiastic over the so-called "nature studies" would go further and assist and inspire chers in the rural schools to enlist the aid of the boys and girls, and plant shrubs and trees in the well selected grounds; make beds of flowers of all kinds; plant roses and vines, till the country school-house with its environment become a thing of beauty. Seneca says, "That is never too often the season lasts, to be renewed from year to year as long as the life of the state; if pictures of art and history hang upon the walls of the school-room and the niches be filled with busts of noble men and women who have left their impress upon the world's progress, then should we see the influence which such conditions would exert upon the children and youth by daily contact with the beautiful and the good. Rude boys and careless girls would soon learn to follow the neatly kept walks instead of running at will over the beds of flowers which their own hands had planted and watered and ere long the same tastes would be introduced into their humble homes, alleyway, the side entrance to the which would blossom like the rose and change from cheerless abode to a paradise of beauty. The recent movement to extend the ground around school buildings is a step in the right remained in a crouching attitude for direction. If every schoolhouse stood in the corner of a ten-acre lot, so much the better. "It would cost too much! But would it? That is the value of a good man to the community, to the brawn and muscle which have pushed state, to the country? What is the peared. Moving like some creeping price of a buman soul?

MELANCHOLIAE. ODE TO MELANCHOLY.

"BILL MONTEITH"

Now, Melancholy, by my Muse; A-Muse me, mournful Melancholy. Dispel the wonted cheer I use, No more may I be gay nor jolly.

Teach me the sober verse to pen, The laughter-giving rhyme to stifle. Indue my soul with sadness, when With Poesie I 'gin to trifie.

A tragic spirit then be mine. And somber thoughts possessing, Let me in midnight darkness shine, The gloom of miud expressing.

Attendant in thy train now lead Thy comrades dull and dreary: The pensive Soberness decreed To those of laughter weary;

Solemnity the dignified, The dullness of Dejection, And all the rest who with thee bide In peace and kind affection.

Surround me with the doleful band, Let mirthful moods forsake me, Drop me the pleasures from thy hand Which sorrowful may make me.

So, Melancholy, be my Muse; A-Muse me, mournful Melancholy. Dispel the wonted cheer I use, No more may I be gay nor jolly Little Billy on the bank, Tiny fishes in the pool; Mamma's slipper spank, spank, Little Billy go to schoo!.

THE GLEEFUL GIRL

How doth the little gleeful girl Employ each fleeting minute, And pat each fluffy tress and curl, And smooth it down and pin it!

How carefully she ties her bows! How neat she pins her lace! And brushes powder from her nose, The rouge from off her face!

In coquetry she has some skill-She is a flirt, 'tis true,-For Cupid finds some victim still For artful eyes to "do."

Then pity the poor verdant youth Who in her toils is cast; For, sadly I confess the truth, He's neither first nor last.

EPITAPH UPON A GHOCOLATE CAKE

It sat upon the pantry shelf In brownish frosting dight, Upon an ancient plate of delft, Enchanting to the sight.

I saw it as I passed that way, And seeing paused a bit; Then drew the burnished steel to slay, And plunged it into it.

I was alone: at such a rate That cakelet ceased to be, That soon, alas! it was all ate. Ate up, all ate by me.

TINKLE, TINKLE. LITTLE BELL

A MORNING SONG

Tinkle, tinkle, little bell! Now I wonder what in-Heaven Father had to rise so early And make all this hurly-burly.

When in peaceful sleep I lie, When in dreams my thoughts do fly, Then you ring your morning call, Tinkle, tinkle; dern it all!

On the wall where you are hung I can't help but hear you rung; For you ne'er your jangling stop Ti'l from out my bed I hop.

Soon as darkness 'gins to flee, And morning slumbers visit me, No more rest nor comfort-well, Tinkle, tinkle, little bell.

A MOURNFUL REFRAIN

 BURGLAR, MOTHER AND CHILD

By Charles Welsted

Copyright, 1902, By the S. S. McClure Company.

The moon dipped behind a cloud just as the old fashioned street lamp was extinguished. Stealing down a dark Elms, a large private residence on Boulevard D, was a lone figure. It halted beneath one of the lower windows and at least ten minutes. Then it stood erect, a figure not more than five feet three, slender and active. The window opened slowly, and the figure disapthing from room to room, the burglar finally emerged into the hall and quietly ascended the stairs, but suddenly came to a halt before a door through which came a dim light.

A child lay there alone. Through a second door, leading to an adjoining room, e burglar could discern the form of a woman, fully attired, asleep on a couch. It was a nurse. The burglar looked back at the child.

"Sickness here, I guess; bad place for my work."

He stood intently watching the baby face resting on the snowy pillows. Then, lost in thought, he stole over to the cot.

"O God!" A moan of anguish came from the burglar's lips.

The little one stirred, and the burglar made a move toward the hall.

"Want - some - wattee," murmured the child. The curly head rolled restlessly. "Mamma, baby want d'ink." At the sound of a voice from the adjoining room the figure disappeared quickly beneath the bed. "Nursie's coming, dear." And the woman hurried to her charge. The hidden figure could have reached out and touched the hem of her dress. "Poor little girl!" the nurse said soothingly.

"Gladys want mamma!"

"Oh, mamma is asleep, dearie. Baby wouldn't wake mamma"-

"Mamma, mamma!" pleaded the child. As if in answer, from down the hall a low, sweet voice called softly: "Mamma's coming, pet."

In a moment a woman entered the room and crossed quickly to the bedside. Reaching over, she kissed the feverish lips and forehead.

"Mamma's here, darling." The little arms reached up and were clasped about her neck. "Gladys loves mamma," whispered the child. "Mamma stay with baby?"

"Yes, darling, mamma will stay." She folded the babe in her arms and hushed her to sleep. Then she crossed the room to where the nurse was sitting in silence.

They whispered together in low tones. The figure beneath the bed was eagerly straining to catch every word. "She is a little better, nurse, is she not?" the mother asked anxiously.

"I think so, madam. This is the first time she has awakened since 8 o'clock. You had better rest while she is asleep."

cannot bear to leave her. It child were my own flesh and blood, I could not love her more. She was brought by the police to the Orphan Asylum of the Gray Nuns in Montreal one day when Mr. Rogers and I were visiting the institution. She has brought such happiness into our lives! The evenings we have spent at home during the two years we have had Gladys have been more than all the rest of my life to me."

Both sat in silence. Ten minutes passed, and the burglar beneath the bed was getting restless. The mother was speaking slowly again, as if in thought:

"Poor little darling! The police say her mother was a wretched creature and the father a confirmed criminal, a brute of a man. Both were serving a term in prison when we took baby. Think of it, nurse-a sweet, innocent little tot like that from such parents! La Roche, I think their name was. They know nothing of the child's whereabouts."

Tears glistened in the woman's eyes as she looked tenderly and yearningly at the sleeping baby and left the room. The nurse lingered a few moments by the child's cot. Then she turned the light very low and stole back to the adjoining room. Later heavy breathing told the burglar beneath the sick child's bed that the household was asleep once more, but for how long?

He crawled out stealthily, but did not hasten from the room. While yet in a kneeling posture, very gently he raised the child's tiny hands and kissed them passionately, then reached over and kissed the fevered forehead. A smile passed over the little one's face. The child was evidently dreaming.

"Me loves mamma," she murmured in her sleep.

A tear fell on the baby's curly head. "O God, what punishment!"

With a look of unutterable anguish the thief hastily slipped from the room and down to the stairway.

Some one was ascending the stairs. The burglar ran to the nearest window and fire escape. There were a piercing scream and a crash. The man on the stairs, startled, reached to his hip pocket, but all was silent again except for a low groan which rose from the court below. He burried to the head of the stairs and peered out into the darkness. The railing of the fire escape was broken, but that was all he could see.

"Listen," said the doctor, who had just entered. "Some one is hurt."
"Burglars," whispered the other. "Be careful, doctor Wait a moment, and I'll go down with you."

The two men reached the court below. Feeble groans came from the angle near the gateway.

"Who's there?" asked the doctor. "Are you hurt? Strike a match, Mr. Rogers."

On the couch in the library they stretched the unconscious form of the burglar.

"He'll not get over this in a hurry, poor devil! Call up the hospital for an ambulance, Mr. Rogers."

The man went to the phone, and the doctor turned on more light. Lifting the burglar's head, he looked closely into the face. "Whew!" he whistled. Then, as he heard Rogers returning, he lowered the lights. "I will go with this poor fellow to the hospital. I'd like to watch his case."

In a few moments the clanging of a gong told of the arrival of the ambu-

"The women are nervous. You had better stay with them," he said. "Tell them the fellow is all right-anything not to excite them."

"May, dear," said the husband next morning as his wife entered the breakfast room after a visit to the sick chamber, "how is Gladys?"

"Much better. The temperature has fallen, and she will surely get well now.

At the same hour the house surgeon on duty at St. John's hospital was looking over an entry in the record book. It read:

Gertrude Dressler, alias Mrs. Theodore La Roche, alias Ned Davis, criminal; killed by fall from the third story of the residence of James Rogers, Boulevard D. while in the act of burgiarizing the place; was dressed in male attire; age, thirtyone; nationality. French Canadian; relatives—husband serving life sentence, Montana; daughter confined in orphan asylum,

Have No Limitations.

Make up your mind that the Creator made you to enjoy life and to have all the good things in this world necessary to your well being and moral and spiritual growth. Think large things for yourself, for the all powerful ruler did not set for you the narrow limit which you have in mind. Limitation in thought will certainly produce limitation in possession. If you are convinced that you will never have much, that you are poor and will remain so, the chances are ten to one that you will.

How can you expect to expand your life, to enlarge your possessions, to widen your sphere, while you think and talk limitation? Enlarge your horizon; be generous to yourself in thought and ambition. The creator never made people to limp along the starvation line; there are enough resources in the world to make everybody well, happy and contented. The great trouble with us is that we circumscribe ourselves by thinking within narrow limits. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."-

Odd Wedding Customs.

In Switzerland the bride on her wedding day will permit no one, not even her parents, to kiss her upon the lips. In many of the provinces the cook pours hot water over the threshold after the bridal couple have gone in order to keep it warm for another bride. There is an old superstition in Germany against May marriages. A favorite wedding day in Scotland is Dec. 31, so that the young couple can leave their old life with the old year and begin their married life with the new one; surely a pretty idea. The Italians permit no wedding gifts that are sharp or pointed, from which practice emanates our superstition that the gift of a knife severs friendship. One of the most beautiful of all marriage customs is that of the bride, immediately after the ceremony, flinging her bouquet among her maiden friends. She who catches it is supposed to be the next bride.

Wigs In Courts.

Before the reign of Charles II. judges wore either a velvet cap, a three cornered hat or a coif, but in 1660 the periwig came over from France, and the grave aspect which it gave to an otherwise commonplace face was appreciated at once by judges and doctors. who immediately adopted it. The former have stuck to it ever since.

Barristers, seeing how good was the effect of a wig, attempted to copy their seniors' example, but the judges had no idea of their copyright being infringed and made things so unpleasant for their imitators that it was nearly half a century later before wigs were universally adopted in law courts .-London Globe.

Paraguay Tea.

Mate, or Paraguay tea, which is the favorite beverage among a population of some 20,000,000, grows wild in the woods of the southern half of South America. For many years its cultivation was a lost art. Although large plantations were planted by Jesuit missionaries more than a century ago, later attempts to raise the plant were fruitless, and not until recently have new plantations been established in Paraguay. The secret of cultivation. it is alleged, is that the seeds will not germinate until treated with a potassium salt.

The Whole Board.

When the Rev. Dr. Newman Hall was in this country in 1867, he attended a meeting of the American board in Buffalo and was entertained by the Rev. Dr. Wolcott Calkins and family, afterward of Newton, Mass. Those were days when the coming of the board to a city or town created considerable stir, and when Dr. Hall entered the bouse one of the children exclaimed. "The board has come!" and early next morning a child's voice at his door kindly asked, "Will the board like some

INDEPENDENT AS EVER. Congressman McCall continues to show

Congressman McCall continues to show that he does his own thinking, and that he isn't afraid to tell the results of that exercise. He favors Cuban reciprocity, on grounds of commercial expediency and to be just to Cuba, and apparently would be willing to make a larger reduction that the pending bill makes on Cuban sugar. The beet trust's appeals for animosity against the sugar trust doesn't delude him or scare him.

A Nebraska man wrote his own funeral sermon, and a friend delivered it. As was to have been expected, the personal pronoun was conspicuous. This sonal pronoun was conspicuous. This method has its advantages. It saves the minister from lying on behalf of the de-"Big Yarn Mill for Sale," is the heading of a recent advertisement. We should think some of the New York newspapers would buy it. Their stocks of big yarns must need frequent replenishing.

Most young ministers would like to be thought older than they are. The Methodists cater to this desire. Their young ministers are ordained as "elders."

The Democratic Old Guard resolves that Bryan is dead. But what does the alleged corpse say about it? Many women seem to think that "marrying well" and "marrying wealth" are convertible terms.

Growing Bananas.

Bananas are as a rule planted out systematically in rows, the "suckers" t an average of ten fee ing placed apart. The banana plant bears only one bunch at a time, but it is a quick grower, yielding its fruit in twelve to fourteen months. When the plant is about six months old, a second "sucker" or shoot is allowed to spring from the root, a third after the ninth month, and so on, so that after the first year there is a continuous crop being reaped.

Fans In Shakespeare's Time. Fans in Shakespeare's time seem to have been composed of ostrich and other feathers fastened to handles. Gentlemen carried fans in those days, and in one of the later figures of the german they now carry fans. According to an old manuscript in the Ashmolean museum, Sir Edward Cole rode the circuit with a prodigous fan, which had a long stick, with which he corrected his daughters.

Of More Importance.

"Get my name right," said the proud owner of the 1,175 pound hog. "It's Judson K. Bimm. My father was Colonel Hiram Hotchkiss Bimm of Lexington, Ky. He came to Illinois in the year"-

"Never mind that," interrupted the secretary of the fat stock show. "Give us the pedigree of the hog."-Chicago Tribune.

HOW A LITTLE THING MAY BE LADEN WITH GREAT RESULTS.

A Sneeze Under London Bridge That Cost Two and Saved Many Lives. A Sneeze That Averted Assassination-One That Caused a Panic.

Exactly at 6 p. m. on the evening of Dec. 13, 1884, a sneeze was sneezed under London bridge which consigned two men to an instant and horrible

Their names were Lomasney and Fleming, and they were conspirators. Their mission was to blow up the bridge with dynamite, because it was considered that at that time there would be more people crossing itworkmen, workgirls and others on their way home from business-than at any other and that the loss in human life would be therefore correspondingly more appalling.

All went well at first. The pair of desperadoes dropped noiselessly down the river in a boat, with forty pounds of dynamite in their possession, together with the necessary fuses and detonators. Arrived at their destination, however, they found that the gully hole underneath the southern arch of the structure, wherein it had been their intention to insert the explosive, had been stopped up. Lomasney undertook to remove the obstruction, but it occupied him some little time. The night was bitterly cold, and his comrade got chilled and was seized with a sudden fit of sneezing. In his agitation he dropped one or more of the detonators he was holding, and these, falling on the dynamite which was laying in the bottom of the boat, exploded it, with disastrous results. Doubtless, however, that inopportune sneeze, although it ended the career of a pair of desperadoes, saved London bridge from de-

That the Right Hon. W. E. Forster died peacefully in his bed instead of being assassinated in 1882 was due to a sneeze. Three times the conspirators laid in wait for him, but the last attempt was the most determined of them all. Four men armed with heavy caliber navy revolvers were to waylay him as he drove from the viceregal lodge to the castle. Two of the assassins were to fire at him from the first floor window of a house in a certain great variety. Experienced chef. Polite street, and the other two were stationed at the window of another house a few yards down on the opposite'side of

These latter were the "reserves" destined to try their skill should their colleagues miss. Neither of the two firing parties were to show themselves until the near approach of their proposed victim was signaled from the street below. The signal in question was to be the waving of a pocket handkerchief by James Carey, the same man who was afterward killed by O'Don-

The plot was excellently planned from the point of view of the participants therein. In fact, so far as human foresight could provide against eventualities the chief secretary seemed as good as dead. Yet it all came to naught and for so simple a reason that the

and for so simple a reason that the plotters themselves, meeting together afterward at their secret rendezvous in North King street, were fain to laugh at their own discomfiture.

The morning was cold and gusty. Mr. Forster was somewhat late, and Carey, chilled with waiting about, began to sneeze. Instinctively he drew out his handkerchief, the handkerchief that was to give the fatal signal, and in an instant the blustering north wind in an instant the blustering north wind had flicked it from his benumbed fingers and sent it sailing down the street 491 MASS. AVE., - - Arlington. as a twenty mile an hour gait.

At that very instant the chief secre tary's carriage turned the corner and came swiftly toward him. Carey ran to the spot which had been previously agreed upon and tried to make his lel low conspirators understand that their victim was in sight by signaling with his arm and pointing.

The result, however, though exactly what might have been foreseen, hardly came up to his expectations. The four men at the windows were waiting for a Spring and Summer Styles. New and Natty Goods. Ladies' and Gents' Clothing man with a handkerchief. Instead, they saw one without any such signaling apparatus, evidently excited and pointing wildly up the street. Instantly they conjured up visions of traitors in their ranks and of detectives on their tracks and, dropping their weapons, incontinently and hastily fled.

On the evening of Oct. 11, 1878, a policeman on duty near the Coliseum Music hall, Liverpool, noticed an unusual commotion at the entrance. Disheveled boys and girls, their clothing in many instances torn from their backs and some of them covered with blood, were pouring from the gallery exits, while from within the building came the sound of shrieking and loud cries for help. Realizing something of what was happening, the constable seized an ax and smashed in two of the "extra" doors.

His prompt action undoubtedly saved scores if not hundreds of lives, for by this time the auditorium had become a veritable pandemonium, wherein several thousand people, mad with terror, were fighting and struggling with one another for precedence.

Thirty-seven of the number lost their lives, and more than twice that number were maimed for life. And the cause of the panic was a fit of sneezing into which a number of girls in the front row of the gallery were thrown owing to some mischlevous person tossing some snuff into the air.

A number of those behind, hearing and seeing a commotion in front, rose to their feet. Others joined them. Shouts and cries added to the confusion. An slarm was raised that the place was on fire, and a simultaneous rush of hundreds of frightened people for the narrow exit doors was followed by the results chronicled.

This system was the first of its nature in the United States and Canada to be endorsed by musicians and adopted in musical institutions, and to receive favorable criticisms from musical critics. A mother, speaking with much feeling, expressed it as her firm conviction that the Fletcher method of teaching music was the greatest boon in the direction of child education since the wonderful work of Froebel.

The Enterprise last week inadvertently credited the call-men of the Fire Department with receiving $37.50 per "month," instead of per "annum," as the statement should have read.

DEFINING ITS POSITION

That newspaper which is forever defining its position is that same paper which has no fixed policy. "Know you are right, then go ahead," should be and is the policy of every public journal that has spine and sand in its makeap. A well settled policy has little need of frequent re-definitions. The clergyman who understands his business selects his text and then sticks to it- He never allows his text to take he place of the sermon. And in no ray different should it be with the ublic journal. Instead of incessantly proclaiming what "we will do," or what "we will not do," the wiser plan 's to go ahead and do it. The reading public must care for the living word instead of its oft repeated definition. It isn't what one intends to do that counts, but what he actually does. So the better way is to go to work and do less talking about "our position" in the world of journalism.

"NO OPINIONS"

We are in receipt of an exchange policies, and no opinions." What a ment of business or professional life! A decided opinion, and a well settled policy, are absolutely essential to any work that shall tell in a positive way What the world most needs is the man who dares to think for himself, and then has the courage to tell what he thinks. That paper which has no policies and no opinions ought summarily to find its way into the waste basket.

In the April number of the Rev ew d Reviews, is an exhaustive and intefesting article on the late Francis Wayland. Parker as an educator and a man The grand secret of his success with These claim that the present only is girl the future man and woman.

Colonel Parker never lost sight, in all his educational work, of American citizenship. To him the Public School was when one sees more clearly with his longest step forward.

He placed manhood and womanhood ahove all mere scholarship. Character building was his aim and purpose in all his school work. He had a supreme contempt for all machine methods in teaching. Colonel Parker never rested.

when one sees more clearly with his eyes shut. New Hampshire and Maine have proven that Old Home Week is hardly less than a penticostal day. What a delight it will be for Arlington to well-and it makes it a crime, and in addition gives a civil remedy as I understand it, makes it a crime, and in addition gives a civil remedy as I understand it, makes it a crime, and in addition gives a civil remedy against a party who has examined it, makes it a crime, and in addition gives a civil remedy against a party who has examined it, makes it a crime, and in addition gives a civil remedy against a party who has examined it, makes it a crime, and in addition gives a civil remedy against a party who has examined it, makes it a crime, and in addition gives a civil remedy against a party who has examined it, makes it a crime, and in addition gives a civil remedy against a party who has examined it, makes it a crime, and in addition gives a civil remedy against a party who has examined it, makes it a crime, and in addition gives a civil remedy against a party who has examined it, makes it a crime for any person in selling merchandise, to indulge in what is commonly known as "trade-talk." or the "puffing up" of his own wares. The law today, as I understand it, makes it a crime for any person in selling merchandise, to indulge in what is commonly through the provided to indulge in what is commonly through the provided to indulge in what is commonly through the provided to indulge in what is commonly through the provided to indulge in what is commonly through the provided to indulge in what is commonly through the provided to indulge in what is commonly through the provided to indulge in what is commonly the provided to indulge in what is commonly through the provided to in teaching. Colonel Parker never rested annual coming together of the scattered satisfied until he reached the real life family! It should ever he held in re of the pupil. He believed in men and membrance that "home" is one of the women, and he believed as well in boys and girls. Nature to him was the great the English language. It is that one teacher of all.

A SUCCESSFUL MAN

one thing and do it well. The many failures in life come for the most part from the attempt to accomplish a variety of work. One too frequently becomes ambitious to spread himself over more ground than he can cover. If we found in the fact that England and would content ourselves to do that for which we are fitted, then there would come more satisfactory results. There has no home-life. To foster and guard should be a proper adjustment between the home is to make the most of the the work to be wrought and the workman. It is these misfits which upset that early arrangements will be made things. There is something wrong in by Arlington, for the coming together our public system of education, which creates an ambition in the boys and the resident and non-resident populagirls for positions in life for which tion of the town. Let us have a real nature never designed them. The ever- love feast. Let us tell over again the lasting fact is, that all honest work is in every way honorable, and that he Let us renew our youth and so all bewho performs it well, is entitled to the come boys and girls again. Let the Scriptural "well done." Horace Mann, clergyman for that one week, lay aside that most distinguished of educators, says, "because absurd notions descend ing to us from the worst and the weakest of men have created factitious distinctions between employments, shall the young man therefore seek a sphere Week should prove the one event of the of life for which he is fitted neither by nature nor by culture and spoil a good cobbler by becoming a poor lawyer, or happy family reunion. commit the double injustice of robbing the mountain goats of a herdsman to make a faithless shepherd in the Lord's pastures. Let the young man remember there is nothing derogatory in any employment that ministers to the well being of the race. It is the spirit that is carried into an employment that elevates or degrades it. The ploughman who turns the clod may be a "Cincinnatus or a Washington, or he may be brother to the clod he turns." Learn first of all for what you are fitted, andthen go at it with both will and zest. Stick to your calling, then will you be likely to come to the top. Do not forget that your success in life will come not so much from what you do, as from how you do it.

"OLD HOME WEEK"

That Massachusetts advises and urges her people through her legislature annually to celebrate one week during the year as Old Home Week, is both timely and fitting. It is more than this, for it is a loving tribute to that past which we all hold in affectionate memory. To get back to the starting point is to begin life anew. We are aware that there are those who think it unwise frequently to dwell upou the years gone by. children was his great love for ours, while as a matter of fact the past them. He recognized in every boy and is that time alone, which we safely hold dearest and most suggestive words in word the definition of which takes in the family life, and it must not be forgotten that God, first of all, instituted the home. The memory of a good home He is a successful man who can do is the safeguard both of the individual script and of the nation. England is safe in her homes, and so is this newer world of ours. The essential difference between the Mother Country together with our own country, and France, is America are made strong in their own home life, while France substantially the home is to make the most of the present and future. It is to be hoped that early arrangements will be made that early arrangements will be made. during the summer so near at hand, of old stories, and sing again the old songs.

MR. APSLY GIVES REASONS

Editor Chronicle—I noticed in the Chronicle of April 12 a communication, signed by Mr. George J. Raymond, relative to an act entitled "An Act to Prevent Missepresentation in the Sale of Merchanrepresentation in the Sale of Merchandise," and stating that the people desired to know the reason or reasons which I had for blocking (as he called it) its way in the sente had for blocking (as he called it) its way in the senate.

Sometime ago, upon my motion, this bill was laid upon the table in the senate, and my reasons for doing so were as follows: A judge of one of our courts called my attention to the bill, stating that, in his opinion, the measure was far too broad and too sweeping a piece of legislation, and if passed at all should at least be passed only in a modified form. The bill had already gone through all its stages in the senate without a word of discussion or explanation by anyone, and I asked that it be laid upon the table merely to give time to the members of which seeks to go farther than that, and to make misrepresentations of matters of opinion, and, as I have before stated. mere "puffing up" of one's wares a penal offence, is not, in my judgment, wise legislation any more than a statute making it a penal offence to lie would be wise legislation, although lying undoubtedly is most reprehensible.

I may add, that nearly all of the newspapers that I have seen appear to take this view, as will be seen by reference to this view, as will be seen by reference to editorials which appeared in the Boston Globe and Boston Herald, in the editions of April 9, 1902, and in the Boston Transcript in the edition of April 10 1902.

This bill has been proported unfavorably in the past by the committee on judiciary, of which I happen to be a member, and even several members of the committee on probate and chancery, which this year reported it, agree that the bill is too broad.

It seems to me that if the bill is to be enacted, it should at least be so amended in its scope as not to make

"trade-talk" a crime.
Yours very truly.
ALBERT S. APSEY.

DRAMATIC ENTERTAIN-MENT.

The musical and dramatic entertainment given Thursday evening in the vestry of the Pleasant Street Congregational church, under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E., brought together a good aual church, under the auspices of the 1P. S. C. E., brought together a good audience. The two dramas. "The Greatest Plague in Life," and "The Man from Texas," were well rendered. The solos and duets were heartily encored. The entire evening would have been most cnjoyable, had the young men in back of the audience room had greater care of their deportment. The program included:
